I consider "The End of the Tether" the best novella Joseph Conrad wrote, although it is now nearly forgotten. Why is it so wonderful? Mainly because the characters ring true. Although the men are all seafarers, the two villains are despicable in ways recognizable to landlubbers.

Actually, what I've just read also included "Typhoon", another short story by Joseph Conrad. Somewhat hard to read, as most works of that era are to those of us living in 2014. Nevertheless, I enjoyed most "The End of the Tether," referring to the end of a life, in this case, of a boat captain.

Youth \(Conrad short story\) - Wikipedia

The young Conrad lived an adventurous life involving gunrunning and political conspiracy, and apparently had a disastrous love affair that plunged him into despair. He served 16 years in the merchant navy. In 1894, at age 36, Conrad reluctantly gave up the sea, partly because of poor health and partly because he had decided on a literary career.

In The End of the Tether, the Captain is obsessed with his daughter's welfare. Whether Conrad used characters that are obsessed with something to drive them to an ending he desires or whether he is making a statement about the invariable end to obsession, is not mine to guess. As opposed to the other reviewers, I enjoy the final story the most.

Portraying a young man's first sea-voyage to the East in Youth, an unenlightened maturity in Heart of Darkness, and the blind old age of Captain Whalley in The End of the Tether, the stories in this volume are united in their theme - the 'Ages of Man' - and in their scepticism. Conrad's vision has influenced twentieth-century writers and ...
